ce
s,

1. The Narodna Transfuzna Sluzba was the central administrative organization for blood collection in Czechoslovakia. Located in Prague, it may have been a part of the State Public Health Institute (Statni Zdravotni Ustav - SZU), although I am not sure. The SZU, however, did have a laboratory for the study of blood groups, and it had other nation-wide responsibilities, which made it the logical administrative center for blood collection.
2. There were blood donor stations in Bratislava, Nitra [4819 N - 1805 E], Zilina, Turciansky Svaty Martin [4904 N - 1856 E], Banska Bystrica [4844 N - 1909 E], Kosice [4842 N - 2115 E], and Presov [4900 N - 2115 E]. Each of these stations shipped dried plasma to Prague, but I do not know the quantities. The Ministry of Health planned to set up a blood collection center in every large hospital in Czechoslovakia but this plan had not produced any results as late as April 1952.

3. Propaganda to induce civilians to donate blood was constantly disseminated. It was rumored that some plasma was sent to North Korea; this news was not well received by the people, as evidenced by their resistance to propaganda for blood donation. I think that there was a possibility that a reserve supply of plasma was being set up for military use.
4. As far as I know, no plasma substitutes have been used in Czechoslovakia, nor do I know of any Soviet plasma substitute.
